STIFF PRICES THROUGH SEASON

Slight Drop in Sugar and Coffee—Groceries Continue High.

The period of extravagant buying is over and there is more sensibleness in the great markets for staples, according to the monthly report on general business and agricultural conditions in Federal Reserve District No. 8, which has been issued by the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. A review of prices as a whole develops more specific declines than recorded in any single month for a long while, but the changes hardly affect articles which will immediately be felt in bills covering living costs. An easier trend is noted in sugar and coffee, as well as in cereals. Groceries generally continue as expensive as ever. Manufacturers produce stiff prices through the season.
